"L&L Holding is dedicated to maximizing property performance, providing our tenants with the very best in service, and reimagining our growing portfolio of iconic New York City buildings for the 21st Century," said L&L Holding chairman and CEO David Levinson. We congratulate him on this prestigious and well-deserved honor and look forward to his continued success at L&L."

As executive vice president of management and construction at L&L, Celestino is responsible for overseeing the day-to-day construction, engineering, building operations and management throughout the company's six million s/f New York City portfolio, and plays an integral role the building redevelopment and commissioning projects at 114 5th Ave., 222 Broadway, 200 5th Ave. and 195 Broadway. He has also guided the engineering, planning and installation process for several large mechanical and architectural capital infrastructure projects.

Additionally, he is a principal member of the Building Owners and Managers Association (BOMA/NY), a member of REBNY Management Board of Directors & Management Council and has served on the board of directors of the New York Energy Consumers Council.

The REBNY award is yet another in a series of industrywide recognitions for L&L Holding and its team in 2016. In January, the company was named "Developer of the Year" by the Greater New York Construction

User Council (GNYCYC) for its role in reimagining and redeveloping commercial office buildings throughout Manhattan. In addition, L&L recently received a 2016 Merit Award from the American Institute of Architects New York City Chapter (AIANYC) for its ambitious re-massing of 390 Madison Ave., and was named a finalist for an excellence award by the New York chapter of the Urban Land Institute (ULI) for its work at 114 Fifth Avenue in the Flatiron District.

A pioneer in transforming neighborhoods, L&L Holding Company also has won widespread acclaim for its work at 425 Park Avenue, a Norman Foster-designed office tower that will be the first full-block tower constructed on the famed boulevard in half a century; and 200 Fifth Ave., the former International Toy Center, an 800,000-square-foot office building that L&L transformed into a trophy office property in 2009.
